

Insurance Recovery

Our core business is helping corporate and municipal policyholders recover insurance proceeds from their historic carriers. We have a track record of resolving difficult insurance claims for corporations and municipalities without litigation, or as settlement counsel to resolve longstanding litigation, and we frequently work on alternative fee arrangements that reward us for our success, not for how many hours we can bill. Our experience includes, among other things, insurance claims under first-party, third-party, and fidelity bond policies, for example:

- Environmental contamination
- Asbestos
- Product liability and toxic torts
- Mold remediation
- Employee theft
- Employment discrimination
- E-commerce
- Business interruption loss

We recognize that resolving complex insurance claims frequently requires mobilization of a team with experience in legal analysis, insurance archeology, policy analysis, environmental science, and financial allocations. Eisenstein Malanchuk LLP has the background and experience to marshal this effort, with a track record of profitable results. Because of our unique structure and experience, we can combine the efficiencies and personal service of a small law firm with the resources and experience of larger firms.

Our approach to insurance recovery reflects our core philosophy. We utilize a multidisciplinary team to analyze the legal, financial, insurance, and technical issues which are all intertwined in a complex insurance claim. When addressing a complex environmental or toxic tort claim, for example, we do not pretend that we are scientists. We integrate scientists into our core team working with you. The result, typically, is resolution of complex insurance claims on an expedited schedule and without litigation. Through our collective years of experience in negotiation, we solve problems efficiently and cost-effectively, and as part of your overall business plan.
